U.N.: Explosives Missing in Iraq

VIENNA, AUSTRIA | The U.N. nuclear agency warned Monday that insurgents in Iraq may have obtained nearly 400 tons of missing explosives that can be used in the kind of car bomb attacks that have targeted U.S.-led coalition forces for months.

Diplomats asked why the United States didn't do more to secure the military installation that had housed the explosives, which they say posed a well-known threat of being looted. Others criticized the United States for not allowing full international inspections to resume after the March 2003 invasion.

The White House played down the significance of the missing weapons, but Democratic presidential hopeful John Kerry accused President Bush of "incredible incompetence" in Iraq.

International Atomic Energy Agency chief Mohamed ElBaradei reported the disappearance to the U.N. Security Council on Monday, two weeks after he said Iraq told the nuclear agency that 377 tons of explosives had vanished from the Al-Qaqaa facility south of Baghdad as a result of "theft and looting ... due to lack of security." Justice's Illness in Spotlight

Rehnquist treated for cancer; court appointments at issue

WASHINGTON | Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist has thyroid cancer, a condition that has temporarily sidelined the conservative anchor of the Supreme Court and injected into the presidential campaign the issue of appointments to the most important legal panel in the United States.

Rehnquist's diagnosis was announced Monday in a terse statement by the Supreme Court. It said the 80-year-old widower underwent a tracheotomy over the weekend and was hospitalized but expected to be back at work next week when the court resumes hearing cases.

Left unsaid was Rehnquist's condition and which type of thyroid cancer he has. Thousands of people develop various types of thyroid cancer. Most types are considered treatable, but many variables exist.

Rehnquist's hospitalization gave new prominence to a campaign issue that has been overshadowed by the war on terror. The next president probably will name one or more justices to a court that has been deeply divided in recent years on issues as varied as abortion and the 2000 election itself. President Bush won that battle after the court issued a key 5-4 decision in his favor, with Rehnquist as part of the majority.

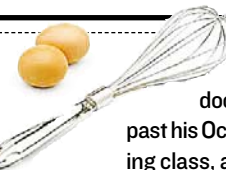

The last court vacancy was in 1994, the longest stretch of continuity in modern history. Only one of the court's nine members — Clarence Thomas, appointed by former President George H.W. Bush — is under 65.

Six Buddhist monks at a temple in Bangkok, Thailand, were arrested and defrocked after hosting wild parties with drugs and alcohol, News Limited News Service reported. There were many complaints by locals about the series of rowdy parties and drug use, said Police Major Annap Nuamnaka. "Villagers are fed up with the monks at this temple, as they always make loud noise when they drink and take pills," Annap said. Five of the saffron-robed monks had taken the amphetamine "yaa baa" — "crazy drug" in Thai — and the sixth was drunk, police said.

Candidates Trade Attacks on Iraq

Bush, Kerry spar on missing explosives, strategy

GREELEY, COLO. | Sen. John Kerry accused President Bush on Monday of "incredible incompetence" in the war on Iraq, citing the disappearance of hundreds of tons of powerful explosives in the country.

Bush, who spoke in Colorado, shot back that his opponent "has the wrong strategy for the wrong country at the wrong time."

The president and his Democratic rival clashed over terrorism and Iraq as the race for the White House entered its final week with the candidates virtually even in opinion polls.

Both candidates are focusing their campaign efforts on fewer than a dozen states that remain highly competitive, including Colorado, where Bush spoke Monday; New Hampshire, where Kerry started the day; and Pennsylvania, where Kerry appeared Monday with former President Bill Clinton.

"Every step of the way, this administration has miscalculated," Kerry said in Dover, New Hampshire.

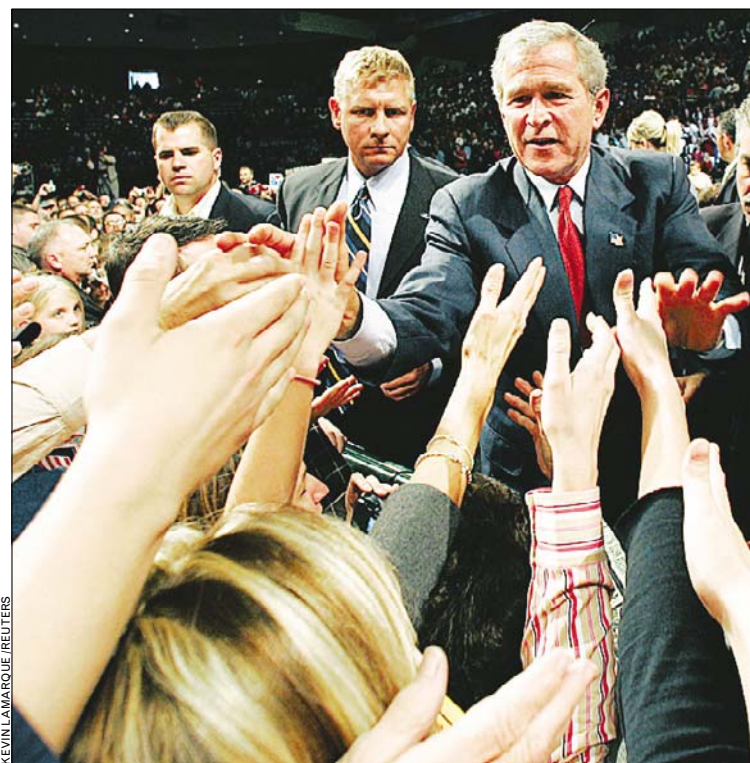

Bush used his campaign appearance to attack Kerry.

"Protest is not a policy" when it comes to battling terrorists, he said. As he has before, he accused the four-term Massachusetts senator of belittling America's allies in the war.

The president also accused Kerry of "the worst kind of Monday-morning quarterbacking" on the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq.

White House spokesman Scott McClellan played down the threat posed by explosives missing from the Al Qaqaa military installation in Iraq. He said there was no threat of nuclear proliferation and preferred to concentrate on weapons destroyed, not those lost.

Clinton Joins Kerry on Campaign Trail

PHILADELPHIA | It was vintage Bill Clinton, a thumb-wagging, center-of-attention performance.

Seven weeks after quadruple bypass heart surgery, looking pale and unusually thin, the former president came back to give John Kerry a sendoff for the final week of the campaign and bluntly framed the campaign between Kerry and President Bush.

"You've got a clear choice between two strong men with great convictions and philosophies, different policies with very different consequences for this city, this state, our nation and the world," Clinton told thousands of Democrats.

Clinton plans to campaign without Kerry this weekend in Nevada and New Mexico as well as his home state of Arkansas.

There were flashes of Clinton at his best from the moment he took the stage with Kerry, waving to the crowd before acknowledging the applause and his medical recovery with one 12-word opening.

"If this isn't good for my heart," he said, putting his hand to his chest, "I don't know what is." (AP)

FBI: Most Violent Crime Fell in '03

Slight rise in murders is only deviation from trend of fewer offenses

WASHINGTON | Violent crime fell last year, with only a slight uptick in murders marring the overall trend of fewer crimes across the country, the FBI said Monday in its annual crime report.

There were just under 1.4 million crimes of murder, manslaughter, rape, robbery and aggravated assault in 2003, 3 percent fewer than 2002 and a decline of more than 25 percent from 1994.

The 2003 figure translates to a rate of 475 violent crimes for every 100,000 Americans, a 3.9 percent decrease from the previous year, the FBI report said. Aggravated assaults, which make up two-thirds of all violent crimes, have dropped for 10 straight years.

Murder was the only violent crime that increased in 2003, with the 16,503 slayings reported by police to the FBI representing a 1.7 percent hike from the year before. Nearly eight in 10 murder victims last year were male and 90 percent were adults.

Property crimes such as burglary, theft and theft of motor vehicles dropped slightly, with the overall total of 10.4 million crimes in 2003 representing a decline of less than 1 percent.

The property crime rate for 2003 was 3,588 crimes per 100,000 Americans, a 1.2 percent decline. Property crime is down 14 percent overall since 1994.

The FBI's annual Uniform Crime Reporting Program statistics largely mirror those of other government studies that show crime at historically low levels. The Justice Department's annual survey of crime victims, released in September, found the nation's crime rate at its lowest point since studies began in 1973. CURT ANDERSON (AP)

N.Y. Crowns New Queen of Subway

NEW YORK | Miss, er, Ms. Subways rides again.

For the first time in 28 years, the city's 220-mile underground rail network has a human face, that of Caroline Sanchez-Bernat. The 29-year-old edged out three other contenders on Monday for the title of Ms. Subways, a promotion revived for the transit system's centennial celebration this week.

The new winner's photo will be posted in the subway, just as were those of the women who held the title between 1941 and 1967.

Sanchez-Bernat was crowned with a tiara and sash at Ellen's Stardust Diner, owned by Ellen Hart Strum, a 1959 Miss Subways.

On Wednesday, the new Ms. Subways will take part in a 100th anniversary re-enactment of the New York subway's inaugural trip, from City Hall to Harlem. She will appear in transit-system advertising and gets to ride free for a year.

One of the three other finalists missed the crowning ceremony. She was delayed on the subway. (AP)

Israeli PM Faces Parliament

Sharon's planned Gaza pullout faces crucial vote

JERUSALEM | Prime Minister Ariel Sharon opened a stormy debate in parliament Monday with a passionate appeal to lawmakers to support his Gaza withdrawal plan — which has divided the country and weakened his government — as the only way to secure Israel's future.

The withdrawal would mark the first time Israel has pulled down Jewish settlements in the West Bank or Gaza, and Sharon is hoping a decisive victory in a parliamentary vote scheduled for Tuesday will blunt calls for a national referendum on the plan.

"This is a fateful moment for Israel. We are dealing with a difficult decision that has few paral-els," he said in a speech repeatedly interrupted by heckling from hard-line opponents.

The two-day debate in the Knesset is the climax of a monthslong confrontation over the "unilateral disengagement" plan, which Sharon has continued to push despite strong opposition from much of his Likud Party and the threat that it could destroy his coalition government.

Meanwhile, violence flared in Gaza, with Israeli troops killing 15 Palestinians and wounding 91 others in a raid on the Khan Younis refugee camp to halt Palestinian mortar fire at nearby settlements.

Violence in Gaza has increased in recent months, with Palestinian

Egypt Bomb Mastermind Died in Blast

Five arrested for lesser roles in resort attacks that killed 34 people

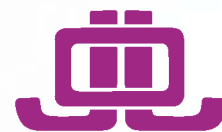

CAIRO, EGYPT | A Palestinian refugee plotted the coordinated bombings targeting Israeli tourists at resorts in the Sinai and accidentally killed himself while carrying out the deadliest blast, Egyptian authorities said Monday.

Egypt's Interior Ministry said in a statement that Ayad Said Saleh was killed in the Oct. 7 bombing of the Hilton hotel in Taba. That blast plus two others that rocked tourist camps in the coastal village of Ras Shitan killed a total of 34 people.

The ministry's statement said two suspects in the campground attacks remained at large.

Meanwhile, the ministry said, police have arrested five Egyptians accused of playing lower-level roles in the attacks, including obtaining explosives and cars used in the attacks. The statement did not say when they were arrested or provide details of their capture. (AP)

Bombs Kill 8 In Iraq

Violence erupts as U.N. confirms tons of explosives missing

BAGHDAD | Bombings struck four coalition and Iraqi military convoys and a provincial government office Monday, killing at least eight people, including an American soldier and an Estonian trooper in the Baghdad area.

The bombings, a day after the bodies of nearly 50 Iraqi military recruits were found massacred, occurred as a U.N. agency confirmed that several hundred tons of explosives were missing from a former Iraqi military depot in an insurgent hotspot south of Baghdad.

A car bomb also targeted an Australian military convoy 350 yards from their country's embassy in Baghdad, killing three Iraqi civilians and wounding nine people, Iraqi and coalition officials said.

Two Islamic groups posted Web site claims of responsibility for the attack on the Australians. One was posted in the name of Jordanian militant Abu Musab al-Zarqawi's group, renamed Al Qaeda in Iraq. It was impossible to determine if either claim was genuine. (AP)

New Round of Talks on Darfur Begin in Nigeria

Many are skeptical
the discussions will lead to lasting peace

ABUJA, NIGERIA | Sudan's government and rebels wrapped up a first day of new peace talks Monday, trying to break a deadlock over security issues keeping aid workers from reaching hundreds of thousands of refugees in Sudan's western region of Darfur.

The rebels said they were calling for a security agreement before signing a humanitarian accord. That demand led to the failure of talks in Nigeria a month ago, and many are skeptical the new talks will fare any better. Talks are to continue Tuesday with the focus shifting to political issues, delegates said.

The crisis in Sudan's western region began in February 2003 when African rebels rose up against the Arab-dominated government, claiming discrimination in the distribution of scarce resources. Major bloodshed followed when pro-government militias reacted by unleashing attacks on Darfur villages.

The United Nations has called Darfur the world's worst humanitarian crisis and said it has claimed 70,000 lives since March, while 1.5 million have fled their homes. (AP)

Vatican Releases Issues 'Handbook'

Officials deny it is timed to influence U.S. vote

VATICAN CITY | A Vatican handbook on Roman Catholic doctrine, published Monday, questions the morality of preventive war and denounces abortion as a "horrendous crime."

Both topics are issues in the U.S. presidential campaign, but at a news conference Monday, Vatican officials denied they wanted to influence the vote. They also sidestepped questions on whether the war in Iraq was illegal and whether Roman Catholics can vote for politicians who back laws permitting abortion.

"The Holy See never gets involved in electoral or political questions directly," Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said.

The 524-page compendium of the Roman Catholic Church's doctrine on social issues ranging from war and peace to the death penalty, globalization, the free market and workers' rights, appeared to break no new ground. FRANCES D'EMILIO (AP)

6 Guilty in Pitcairn Sex Case

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA | Six men have been convicted of charges ranging from rape to indecent assault following trials that exposed a culture of sexual abuse on their small Pacific island, home to descendants of the 18th-century mutineers from the British ship H.M.S. Bounty.

Among those convicted late Sunday was the mayor of Pitcairn Island, Steve Christian, who claims to be a direct descendant of mutiny leader Fletcher Christian. He was convicted of five rapes.

als, which began Sept. 30. Sentences will be announced later this week, British authorities said Monday.

Islanders have expressed concern that if the men are imprisoned, there will be no one to crew a long boat that serves as the island's lifeline — transporting freight and passengers to and from passing ships that cannot dock along the rocky shore. Pitcairn has a permanent population of just 47.

In all, seven men faced more than 50 sex abuse charges, some dating back 40 years. Prosecutors built their case on the testimony of eight women, painting a picture of a male-dominated society in which underage sex was commonplace. (AP)

U.S. Mormons Expelled From Belarus

MINSK, BELARUS | Authorities expelled two U.S. citizens, both Mormons, for "illegal missionary activity," Belarus' security agency said Monday.

The two came to Belarus to work with an international humanitarian organization called "Sofia" in the eastern town of Mogilyev, said the security service, known by its acronym, KGB. Their names were not given.

The KGB said the two were expelled because they were conducting "illegal missionary activity" and because the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — the formal name for the Mormon church — was not registered in the Mogilyev region. (AP)

Killing of 84-pound female sparks new debate over Md. hunt

OAKLAND, MD. | Maryland's first bear hunt in 51 years started Monday with a small one: an 84-pound female less than 1 year old.

State wildlife managers said the animal's size proved that the hunt isn't about trophies. An animal-protection advocate said it only illustrated hunters' blood lust.

By early afternoon, hunters had registered five black bears at Department of Natural Resources checking stations. The hunt is scheduled to last six days but it will end after 30 bears have been killed.

The first kill was claimed by David Ciekot, a freelance outdoor writer from the Eastern Shore. Ciekot, 35, of Cambridge, said he downed the bear just after dawn with a 40-yard rifle shot through the lungs from his tree stand on private property in Garrett County.

Pierre Grzybowski, grass-roots coordinator for The Fund for Animals, said Ciekot's kill proved that "bear hunters are so eager to shoot a bear that they will shoot any bear they come across." DAVID DISHNEAU (AP)

D.C. School Bus Drivers Hold Sickout

WASHINGTON | Hundreds of special education students were left waiting for school buses that never showed up Monday after some of the drivers and attendants staged a sickout.

Despite a warning issued late Friday by the District of Columbia

Public Schools about a possible sickout, many parents were caught unaware and had to scramble after 260 employees failed to report for work. Of the city's 600 school bus routes, about 100 had either no service or late service. (AP)

Mayor 'Unclear' Who's in Charge

Feds, D.C. don't have jurisdictional plan in case of emergency

WASHINGTON | More than three years after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, local officials in the nation's capital do not know what might lead the federal government to take control of public safety efforts in a future emergency.

"It's been unclear since 9/11 and we've been talking about it since then," District of Columbia Mayor Anthony A. Williams said Monday. Williams was among officials who testified at a D.C. Council Judiciary Committee hearing into command and other jurisdictional issues stemming from the district's huge federal presence.

While the Metropolitan Police Department has jurisdictional authority on incidents that occur on city streets, U.S. government facilities are controlled by various federal law enforcement agencies including the Secret Service, the FBI and the Federal Protective Service.

"There has got to be a level of understanding about who's in charge," said Richard Ben-Veniste, a former member of the 9/11 Commission.

The D.C. Council is also considering legislation prohibiting the rail shipment of hazardous materials not designated for local use through the city. DERRILL HOLLY (AP)

Cingular's AT&T Bid OK'd

$41B deal would create largest wireless phone company in country

WASHINGTON | Justice Department antitrust regulators cleared the way Monday for Cingular Wireless LLC's $41 billion acquisition of AT&T Wireless Services Inc., a crucial step toward creating the nation's largest wireless telephone company.

The merger still must be approved by the Federal Communications Commission. That could come as early as Tuesday.

Under an agreement with the Justice Department, Cingular — a joint venture between BellSouth Corp. and SBC Communications Inc. — must divest itself of the new company's assets in 11 states.

"Without these divestitures, wireless customers in these markets would have had fewer choices for their wireless telephone service and faced the risk of higher prices, lower quality service and fewer choices for the newest high-speed mobile wireless data services," said R. Hewitt Pate, assistant attorney general for the Justice Department's antitrust division.

Two opponents of the deal — Consumers Union and the Consumer Federation of America — said the settlement does not do enough to protect consumers. They said the new company will have no incentive to compete against BellSouth and SBC in parts of the country where they overlap. HARRY R. WEBER (AP)

A CINGULAR SENSATION

Details of the planned merger between Cingular Wireless and AT&T Wireless Services Inc.:

THE DEAL WOULD give Cingular 47.6 million subscribers.

CINGULAR WOULD TOP Verizon Wireless, the current market leader with 40.4 million customers as of midyear, while paring the number of national cell phone providers to five.

TOGETHER THE TWO companies have about 70,000 employees, but layoffs are expected if the merger goes through.

THE NEW COMPANY would provide wireless services in 49 states and the 100 top metropolitan areas.

Yahoo, Adobe Team Up for Web War

SAN JOSE, CALIF. | Stepping up the heated battle of online search and services, Yahoo Inc. and Adobe Systems Inc. have joined forces to tap each others' customers and put Web search features into Adobe's popular Acrobat Reader software.

The broad strategic relationship is Yahoo's latest maneuver against chief rivals Google Inc. and Microsoft Corp. in the fight to become the gateway of search and Web access on as many desktops as possible.

For Adobe, the partnership will add online features to one of the software maker's core products, Acrobat. The program is used by more than 500 million people and has become a common format for viewing documents over the Web and in e-mail attachments.

Under the deal, Adobe will first introduce a cobranded Yahoo browser toolbar that users can choose to install on their computers when prompted to download an update of Acrobat Reader.

Later, the toolbar will add features such as the ability to quickly convert Web-based content into Adobe PDF files. Yahoo search will also be built into a future version of the Acrobat Reader, allowing users to search for more information from within the document without going through the extra steps of launching a Web browser. OOPS: Don't ask John Kerry for World Series scores. At different points Sunday, Kerry said: "10-9, the Sox did fabulous," referring to Boston's 11-9 win in Game 1 Saturday, and "7-1 Red Sox!" of Boston's 6-2 win in Game 2.

Arrington Re-Injures Right Knee

REDSKINS | LaVar Arrington strained his right knee in practice Monday, a setback for the three-time Pro Bowl linebacker who is hoping to play this week after missing four games.

Arrington was hurt on a wet practice field as the Washington Redskins returned from a four-day, bye-weekend vacation.

Arrington had surgery on the knee Sept. 23. He was optimistic that he could use the extra week of rest during the bye to return for Sunday's game against the Green Bay Packers.

Arrington

"I don't think it's much of a setback, but we'll see," Gibbs said.

John Hall, who strained the groin in his kicking leg two weeks ago, did not practice. Ola Kimrin, who made two field goals and an extra point in the pre-bye victory at Chicago, remains on the roster until Hall is able to kick again. Gibbs said Hall is "day-to-day."

Linebacker Mike Barrow also remained on the sidelines Monday. Barrow has been out since the beginning of training camp with tendinitis in his knee. The team has considered shutting down Barrow for the season to open a roster spot, and Gibbs hinted such a decision could be coming this week.

SHAUN BEST/REUTERS

SO FAR, SO GOOD: The Red Sox led the Mets 2-0 in the 1986 World Series and the rest is history. Will this year be different?

Halfway to History

Curse looms over Red Sox despite series lead

BASEBALL | Curt Schilling and the pitchers are clicking. Little Mark Bellhorn and the hitters are delivering. Manager Terry Francona is making all the right moves.

And despite a defense that can't quite seem to catch the ball, the Boston Red Sox are halfway to capturing something that's slipped just out of reach since 1918 — the World Series trophy.

So with a 2-0 lead and Pedro Martinez set to make his Series debut against the St. Louis Cardinals on Tuesday night, could it really be this easy for the Red Sox?

"We are not going to fall into the trap after winning the first two," reliever Alan Embree said. "You saw what happened with the Yankees."

Besides, Boston fans remember all too well what happened the last time the Red Sox reached the Series. After winning twice at Shea Stadium in 1986, they lost to the New York Mets in seven games.

Now on deck: a tantalizing treat for this oh-so-close club ... or a cruel trick.

The Cardinals will have plenty to say about that. They're determined to force the Series back to Boston, perhaps for a Game 7 on Halloween night.

The Cardinals are a perfect 6-0 at Busch Stadium this postseason and looked a lot different than they did in Boston. The last time they were home, Jeff Suppan outpitched Roger Clemens, and St. Louis beat Houston in Game 7 of the NL championship series.

"I think it's a big edge," manager Tony La Russa said Monday. "Our fans make us excited."

BEN WALKER (AP)

Taking charge: Bob Watson, baseball's vice president of on-field operations, has been offered the Expos' general manager's position | Today's Post, Sports

Suppan Ready to Face Former Team

BASEBALL | Last year, Jeff Suppan had the Boston Red Sox behind him when he pitched. In Game 3 of the World Series on Tuesday night, he'll be starting against them.

Regardless of the magnitude of the game, it's not something that makes him uncomfortable.

"Coming up through that organization, it was actually more strange for me to go back there last year than it is for me to throw against them this year," Suppan said Monday.

The St. Louis Cardinals, who face a 2-0 deficit in the best-of-seven series, are Suppan's fifth team. Besides being acquired from the Pittsburgh Pirates at the trade deadline last year, Suppan also pitched for Boston from 1995-97.

Last year was not a happy homecoming in Boston. He was left off the Red Sox's roster for the first round of the playoffs and did not pitch in the AL championship series.

PETER JONES/REUTERS

Suppan's win over Roger Clemens last week sent St. Louis to the World Series.

Now it's all old news.

He's been the Cardinals' most consistent pitcher in the postseason with a 2-1 record and 2.84 ERA. He was the winner in the clinching victory in both the division series and NLCS. That success followed a career-best 16 regular-season victories.

"He's just done a really good job of pitching at his level in some key playoff opportunities," manager Tony La Russa said. R.B. FALLSTROM (AP)

Boston's Second Fiddle

Martinez takes a back seat to Schilling before Game 3's start

BASEBALL | For all his Cy Young Awards, for all his October theatrics, Pedro Martinez has become almost an afterthought for the Red Sox during their postseason surge.

He's the former ace of the Boston staff who won three Cy Youngs and called the Yankees his "daddy" because of their recent success against him. But he's been overshadowed by the buzz about Curt Schilling's stitched-up ankle and clutch pitching.

Now he's Boston's new No. 2, and he's set to make his World Series debut against the St. Louis Cardinals on Tuesday night in Game 3.

He won't have to play the savior. That's because Schilling pitched six exceptional innings Sunday night when the Red Sox won 6-2 and took a 2-0 lead.

Martinez's postseason numbers this year are mediocre — a 1-1 record with a 5.40 ERA in four appearances, three of them starts. At least that's better than his last four regular-season starts. He finished 0-4 with a 7.71 ERA.

Still, Sox manager Terry Francona isn't worried. "I expect Pedro to pitch his fanny off," he said. "Anytime we start Pedro, believe me, we're excited about it."

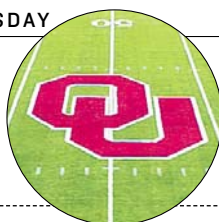

HOWARD ULMAN (AP)

RAY STUBBINE/REUTERS

Presumably, Pedro Martinez won't hear "Who's Your Daddy" chants in St. Louis.

SOONER, NOT LATER: Oklahoma jumped over Miami to No. 2 in the Bowl Championship Series standings Monday and Utah is now sixth, a position that would guarantee the Utes a spot in one of the four big-money bowl games if they can hold on to it. USC is No. 1.

Florida Gives Coach Zook the Hook

School plans to talk to Spurrier about return

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Florida coach Ron Zook was fired Monday after two-plus years and a stack of embarrassments on and off the field, satisfying a growing groundswell for his ouster that began the day he replaced Steve Spurrier.

Zook will finish out the season while athletic director Jeremy Foley and school president Bernie Machen search for another coach.

The Gators are 20-13 under Zook with four games left — 14 losses fewer than Spurrier had in 12 seasons.

Zook's latest debacle, a 38-31 loss to Mississippi State, sealed his fate and brought jubilation among those in Gator Nation who turned www.fireronzook.com into their Internet home page. The site posted this message Monday: "It's happening! It's happening! Oh my God it's happening!"

Spurrier's return would be welcomed in Gainesville.

"I'll cross that bridge if it comes to that," Spurrier told the Orlando Sentinel. "The thing I've tried to do all this year is not be lingering around, acting like I'm waiting for another guy's job. But now that he doesn't have a job, I guess there will be some discussion."

Foley plans to talk with Spurrier soon but said he won't discuss the opening with coaches with jobs until after the season. MARK LONG (AP)

Redskins Release Tackle K. Jones

REDSKINS | The Washington Redskins today released right tackle Kenyatta Jones, who started three games this season. Jones, a third-year veteran, had been named Washington's starting right tackle after Jon Jansen suffered a season-ending Achilles injury in the pre-season opener.

But after the Redskins rushed for 166 yards in the season-opener against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, Jones lost his starting job in Week 2 to 41-year-old Ray Brown. The Redskins cited Jones' ankle ailment for playing a part in the switch, but Jones had said that the injury wasn't much worse than in previous weeks.

To replace Jones, the Redskins signed veteran offensive lineman Vaughn Parker to the active roster. NUNYO DEMASIO (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Pistons to Give a Ring to Fan

The Detroit Pistons will award a ring to a randomly selected fan on Nov. 2, the same day Detroit players and coaches will raise a banner celebrating their NBA title and receive their rings. The team is making the gesture as a thank you to the fans who supported the Pistons during their run to the championship. (AP)

Capoeira for Beginners

INTERNATIONAL CAPOEIRA ANGOLA FOUNDATION

(6906 4th St. NW; Metro: Takoma Park) Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 6:30-8 p.m., Saturday 12-1: 30 p.m., Sunday 11 a.m.-1 p.m. First class free. For more info: capoeira-angola.org or call 800-920-3277.

WHAT IT IS: Kick it Brazilian-style with capoeira (capo-EY-ra), a ritualized martial art that weaves together fighting, dance, and music.
Sometimes the class resembles dance instruction, with a teacher leading the students through moves and sequences. There's also plenty of unstructured time to play in pairs, and occasionally everyone will sit in a circle and watch as two students battle it out. What capoeira isn't:
Self-defense. You won't learn to go Buffy on muggers here.

MOVES: Packed with spins, cartwheels and headstands, capoeira demands some natural agility. It looks a little like breakdancing, but you're doing it with a partner, so every kick requires a counter-step or a lean to avoid getting hit. Moves are performed low to the ground, with hands used for balance while legs and feet do the attacking. Don't worry about bruising — the goal is to imply strikes rather than actually hit your partner.

LINGO: The most basic steps are
"ginga," a side-to-side movement, and "negativa," a defense pose in which a player falls to the floor in a side lunge and blocks his face with his arm. When capoeiristas play capoeira, they do so inside a circle called a "roda" (pronounced ho-dah) and are accompanied by tunes coming from a "berimbau," which looks like an archery bow with a gourd on the end.

CLAIRE DUGGAN

Capoeirista
Jennifer Matel
practices
the "ginga"
move.

GARB: Handstands are involved, so be sure your shirt can be tucked into your pants. Regulars wear uniforms of black pants and yellow shirts.

CROWD: A crew of dedicated folks flock to the beginner classes and can help newbies acclimate to the close-knit community, which can be intimidating at first glance. Most are young adults, but all ages can join in.

How do you decide if you've injured yourself enough to see a doctor? I went hiking on Saturday and pulled something badly enough that I could barely walk Saturday night or Sunday morning. But it was much better by Sunday night.

If you rest it and it's much improved in 24 hours, it's not likely it was anything more serious.

The muscles around my knees ache after I run, but the symptoms don't seem to match runner's knee. Any ideas?

It could be tendonitis. Tendons take a while to remodel and become strong enough to endure the stress.
To aid in the healing process, stretch and use ice after running. You should also be warming up for five or 10 minutes before exercise.

Network It Out

OBESITY | Yoga and dance workshops for kids. Free bike locks to encourage students to cycle to school. A food bank that offers fitness workouts for children.

These are among the projects encouraged by a 2-year-old Chicago consortium tackling childhood obesity.

"The obesity epidemic is one of the defining public health challenges of the 21st century," said Dr. Matthew Longjohn, head of the Consortium to Lower Obesity in Chicago Children. He believes the problem demands unprecedented collaboration across all sectors of society.

Housed at Children's Memorial Hospital, the consortium funds a variety of obesity-fighting projects and research throughout the city. It's also an information-sharing network that has amassed nearly 700 partners citywide, including doctors, schools, museums, industry and charity groups that reach tens of thousands of children.

Fighting obesity "has to be much deeper than just a doctor and a patient," said AMA President Dr. John Nelson, citing dire projections: 400,000 Americans will die this year from obesity-related causes. "We've got to have a cultural change," Nelson said. LINDSEY

FINALLY, DAHLING: Zsa Zsa Gabor got the recognition she deserves when she was inducted into the B-Movie Hall of Fame. The glamorous, accented blonde starred in such films as "The Girl in the Kremlin" and "Queen of Outer Space."

The Everlasting Bunny

How 62-year-old Golden Books became the little imprint that could

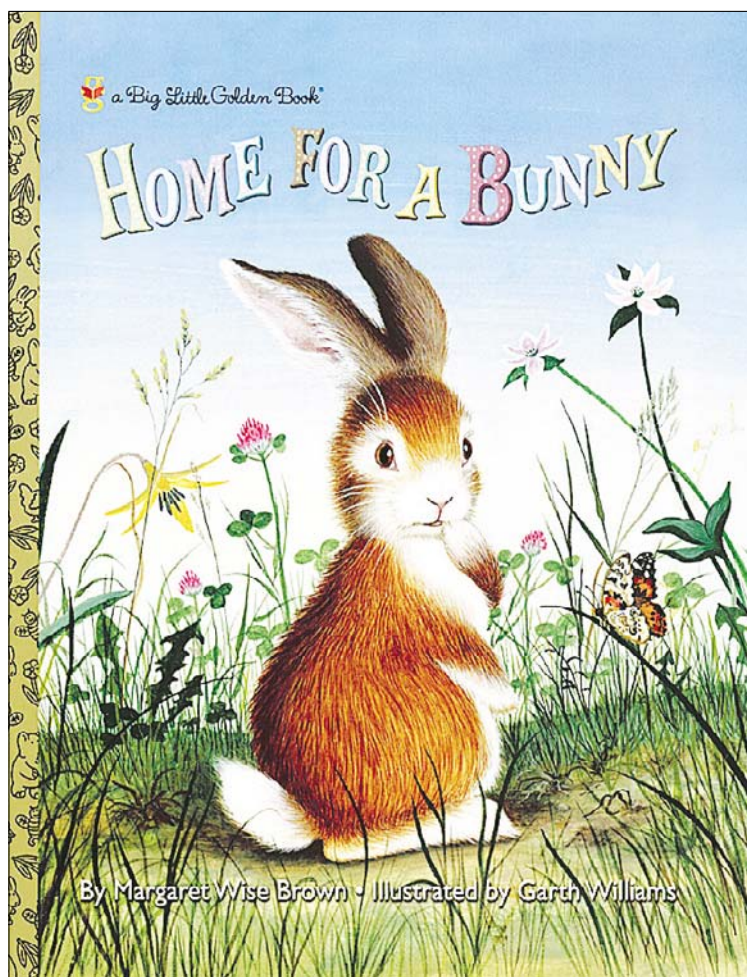

NOSTALGIA | Golden Books were the books that children could buy with their allowance, read until the pages were ready to fall out and then toss in the trash as they graduated to weightier material.

But a funny thing happened to the books with the bright covers and metallic bindings that cost a quarter when they were first published during World War II: They became collector's items, and many of the stories remain popular today.

Golden Books celebrates its rich archive with an exhibit at the New York Public Library's Donnell Center that features artwork from 62 years worth of books, including original illustrations by Richard Scarry.

"As we look back on the collection that we have, the books and artists represent some of the best writers and illustrators ever in children's literature," said Diane Muldrow, editorial director of Golden Books, an imprint of Random House.

As an example, she cites Garth Williams whose cover image for 1954's "The Friendly Book" and the cover and an illustration for "Home for a Bunny" from 1956 are part of the exhibition. Williams has a warm, realistic and timeless style that is as relevant now as it was then, said John Peters, senior librarian at the Donnell Center.

Muldrow added: "Golden Books are aimed to 2-to-5-year-olds, so children are hearing the story and staring at the pictures — and they really stare — not reading the words. A picture book has to tell the story in the art."

She points to "The Happy Man and His Dump Truck."

"The happy man has a 5 o'clock shadow, which adds so much to the character and the book. ... It's also a great title, right? You'll smile when you see it."

Not every Golden Book, however, has that sweet retro charm; some look just plain old.

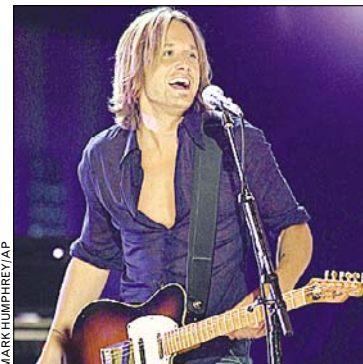

The aqua and purple cover on Mary Blair's "The Up and Down Book" looks every bit as 1964 as its copyright, and the gang on the front of a pocket-size "Our Gang" book doesn't exactly reflect the diversity to which most kids in 2004 are accustomed.

But the part of the exhibit that might look the most strange and unfamiliar to today's children are the sketches that have pieces of wax paper with text from a typewriter pasted on. What, no PowerPoint?

Sure he's talented, but who cares?

Hey, Good-Lookin': Urban, Contemporary

1 Contemporary country hunk Keith Urban may be Australia-born, but his screaming female fan base doesn't hold that against him. He brings his sexy long hair and fiery guitar-playing to GMU.

George Mason University, Patriot Center, 4500 Patriot Circle; 7 p.m., $28.50-$35; 800-551-7328.

Head Over Heels: TFF 4-Ever

2 Come out, come out, Tears for Fears fans. It's become perfectly respectable to find dancefloor majesty — if not philosophy — in the gloomy '80s twosome's stylish, over-the-top synth-pop.

Lisner Auditorium, 730 H St. NW; 8 p.m., $45; 800-551-7328. (Foggy Bottom-GWU)

Barbie Talks: Women in History

3 Kristina Milnor of Barnard College discusses the social, cultural and political burdens assumed by Barbie in the 1993-97 "Great Eras Collection" in the lecture "Barbie as Grecian Goddess and Egyptian Queen: Women's History by Mattel."

Library of Congress, 10 1st St. SE; noon, free; 202-707-2905. (South Capitol)

Heartache Spoken Here

A tribute to the late Warren Zevon is unfittingly uneven

MUSIC | Like most tribute discs, "Enjoy Every Sandwich: The Songs of Warren Zevon" (Artemis), is wildly uneven, with some transcendent moments alongside some head-scratchers.

Particularly pleasing are live offerings by Bob Dylan and Bruce Springsteen on "Mutineer" and "My Ride's Here," respectively, and Zevon's son Jordan's take on the previously unreleased nugget "Studebaker."

But then there's Adam Sandler doing Zevon's most well-known song, "Werewolves of London." Why did anyone ever think that would be a good idea?

Sandler doesn't ruin the song. He actually sings it straightforwardly, with no ad-libbing, but it stings of what could have been.

Equally perplexing is Billy Bob Thornton's throaty croak of the previously unreleased Zevon composition "The Wind." Thornton was friends with Zevon, but that doesn't mean he can sing.

The Wallflowers, featuring another Dylan (Jakob, son of Bob), turn the entire project upside down with the most rollicking song on the set, "Lawyers, Guns and Money."

They do justice to the song, but it leaves the listener looking for equally pleasing versions of other Zevon classics that are missing like "Roland the Headless Thompson Gunner" and "Excitable Boy."

Maybe those are for the next tribute. SCOTT BAUER (AP)

NICE TRY: It's tough to do justice to Zevon's songs.

HE CAN MOVE NEXT TO JOEY: Another cast member of "The Sopranos" is headed to a prime-time comedy. Steve Schirripa (Bobby "Bacala" Bacallieri on the HBO series) is slated to star in a comedy based on his book, "A Goomba's Guide to Life."

Drag Race: So Fun It's Scary

Dupont Circle gears up for the High Heel Race

OUT & ABOUT | The Tuesday night before Halloween is almost as much of a tradition around here as the actual holiday.

That's when the venerable 17th Street High Heel Race, organized by Delta Lambda Phi, teeters, ambles and sashays — and sometimes even runs — down a Dupont Circle corridor for the honor of impressing a whole lot of drunken spectators.

The race's slogan is "It's just a run in your stockings," but for the wig-bearing, cosmetic-sparkled, prop-toting, coolly waving hordes of men dressed as everything from geishas to pop stars to queens of outer space, it's a deadly serious stroll whose preparation soaks up a good chunk of the year.

Lucky property owners along 17th Street climb onto their balconies or hang out of windows to watch the dazzling festivities, but mere mortals must line up early — before 6 would be perfect; bring a flask and a magazine — to stake out a curbside claim before the 9 o'clock event.

And needless to say, when it's all over, almost everyone repairs to JR's, the Fireplace or another convenient boîte to dish the costumes. (EXPRESS)

17th street between P and R streets NW; 9 p.m., free. (Dupont Circle)

SEND SUNSCREEN: Apparently, ABC found “Lost” profitable. The castaway drama has been picked up for a full season, which means nine new episodes will be shot besides the 13 already in production, the Honolulu Star-Bulletin reported.

Three Days of Fear

Bravo takes a stab at the ‘100 Scariest Movie Moments’

COUNTDOWNS | Everyone has a private list, but Bravo is taking the bold step of announcing the “100 Scariest Movie Moments” (9 p.m.) — a three-night shrieking, gibbering, begging-for-mercy-fest that is sure to get viewers in a Halloween mood.

Bravo’s list concentrates on latter-day horror — slasher flicks, psychos and buckets of blood. “Scream” is in there, as is “Misery,” “Alien,” “Silence of the Lambs,” “Carrie,”

ACK! JACK! “The Shining” is full of memorably creepy moments like this.

“The Exorcist” and “Texas Chainsaw Massacre.” The list is so relentlessly youthful the inclusion of 1968’s “Night of the Living Dead” looks like a sop to ancient history.

Leaving out the shocking moments of great silent and pre-color film movies makes for a less-than-exhaustive list, but there are a couple of surprises, including a heart-stopping moment from the 2000 Japanese film “Audition.”

Anyway, getting folks to their local arty video store to discover new delights isn’t the point. The point is that these are the shock-flicks most of us remember, and we’ll enjoy seeing scenes from them again and again, if only to argue. This is a novelty nostalgia show just in time for Halloween— call it “I Love the Screemies.” (EXPRESS)

ON TV TONIGHT

IT’S SHOPPING SEASON

NOVA (8 p.m., PBS) On “The Perfect Pearl,” the NOVA crew travels to farms and follow divers on a quest to track the business — gathering, polishing and selling — of these beautiful ocean gems. Which look really good on us — hint, hint.

HOLIDAY GENDER ISSUES REDUX

ACCORDING TO JIM (9 p.m., ABC) Jim (Jim Belushi) is worried his son is a “sissy” because Kyle wants to be Cinderella for Halloween. First of all, they did the exact same plotline on “Roseanne” (DJ wanted to be a witch). And second — Cinderella’s blue ball gown? What is he thinking? Everyone knows the boy’s a winter.

THE ROSES LOOK GREAT

CSI: NY (8 p.m., CBS) The team unearths a Mafia body-dumping area, forcing the Mob to start planting its corpses behind the tool shed, like everybody else.

WAS IT THE MONEY, NORM?

GILMORE GIRLS (8 p.m., WB) Norman Mailer guest stars as ... wait, sorry. It’s hard to get past the “Norman Mailer guest stars” part.

TEENS IN HEAT

ONE TREE HILL (9 p.m., WB) Joyce Carol Oates guest stars ... just kidding.

MAYBE HE’LL COME THIS YEAR

IT’S THE GREAT PUMPKIN, CHARLIE BROWN (8 p.m., ABC) In the history of trick-or-treating, are there four sadder words than, “I got a rock”? (EXPRESS)

Coffee choice goes political as drinkers look to help farmers

Mark Van Wormer is a fair trade coffee guy.

He drinks it at home. He persuaded the private school where he teaches to make the switch. And he always requests a fair trade blend at Starbucks.

"I was very attracted to the notion of buying a product that could actually put a little bit more money in the pockets of the smaller farmers," said Van Wormer, a resident of the Albany, N.Y., area.

Socially conscious consumers such as Van Wormer have made fair trade brews a rapidly growing niche of the coffee market. The beans can now be found on supermarket shelves.

The term "fair trade" describes organized efforts to give small growers in other countries a price for their products that gives them a decent living. Not-for-profit organizations such as TransFair USA certify which products can carry a fair trade label.

The growth in sales of fair trade coffee has been so strong that fair traders are increasing their marketing efforts beyond coffee, leading to a fair trade push on sugar, chocolate, fruit juice, bananas and more.

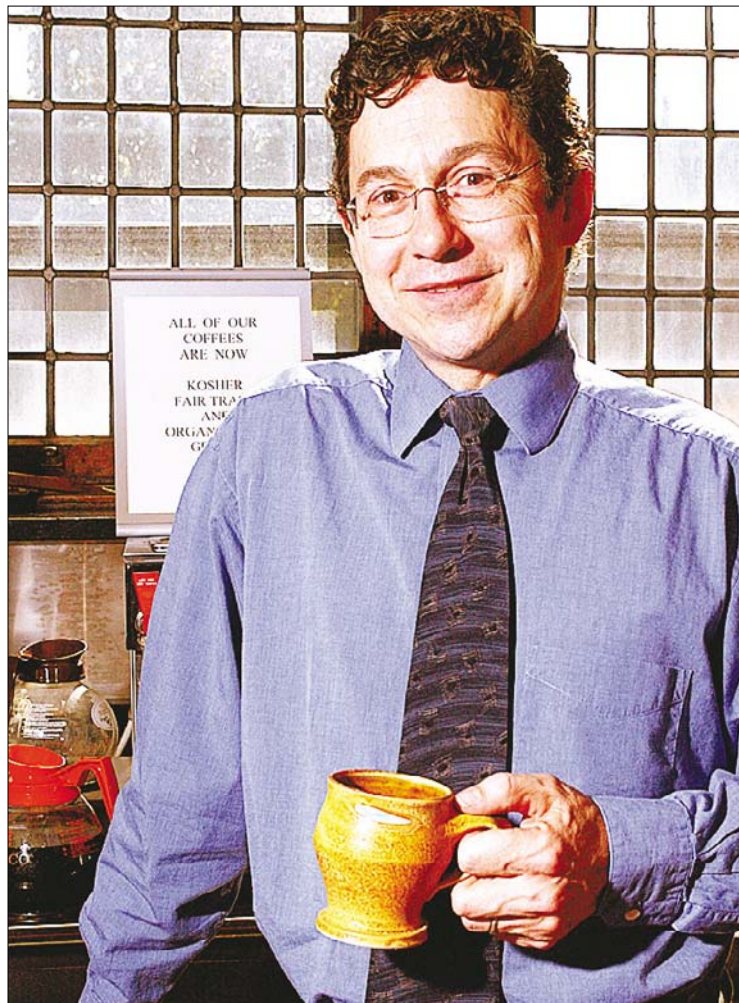

TransFair USA President and CEO Paul Rice expects about 30 million pounds of fair trade coffee to be imported this year, up from 18.7 million pounds in 2003.

Starbucks' fair trade use has tripled over the past two years; their baristas honor requests for fair trade drinks even if they're not a stretch to check its political pedigree.

He also mentions the "feel good" factor — the belief held by consumers that they're making the world a bit better with their cup of coffee.

Coffee was a logical fair trade beachhead since drinkers of high-toned brews were already used to paying a bit more per cup.

TransFair began certifying fair trade bananas, pineapples and mangoes this year. Equal Exchange just launched fair trade chocolate bars and will offer fair trade sugar packets to food service businesses.

For fair trade to really catch on, Rice said more consumers would have to "connect the dots" between the food on the shelf and the farmer in the field.

For the first time, this summer's Fancy Food trade show in New York City included a fair trade exhibit feanot a featured blend. Espressos at Dunkin' Donuts are fair trade. Procter & Gamble offers a fair trade Mountain Moonlight coffee.

"It's still a very small percentage of the market, but something that people are starting to pay more attention to and roasters are starting to view as a market niche worthy of servicing," said Joseph DeRupo of the National Coffee Association.

In an era when food is scrutinized for everything from carb content to growth hormones, it's turing makers of coffee, tea, chocolate syrup and fruit juices.

"We see it as a category that will grow," said Denise Shoukas, spokeswoman for the National Association for the Specialty Food Trade.

Can you suggest a program that allows for printing multiple photos on one sheet of photo paper? For example, printing wallet-size photos on an 8x10 sheet.

Most of the photo album programs that I've seen — iPhoto, Photoshop Album, Picture It! — allow this. Select a bunch of photos, select the Print command, specify wallet size and you should get that option automatically.

I want to burn MP3s from different sources all as a CD, but I want the volume to remain consistent throughout. Can you recommend software or a procedure to do that?

Yes. A lot of digital-music programs have this sort of volume-leveling option. iTunes includes it and so does the paid Plus version of Musicmatch Jukebox.

Is there any software I can get for complete protection from adware/spyware?

Yeah. Linux or Mac OS X. If you don't want to be bothered with spyware and don't need to run any Windows-only programs, you ought to look at a non-Windows operating system.

Otherwise, you should download and install Mozilla Firefox and make that your default browser. Keep a spyware monitor like AdAware Personal handy. And make sure you keep a firewall program (either the one built into Windows, or ZoneAlarm) running at all times.

Not that I have anything to hide ... but is there a way to delete items or clear the list of cached pages on that Google Desktop Search program? What if I don't want my wife or kids or whoever being able to look back on any page I've viewed?

Yes. You can exclude entire folders from Google Desktop's indexing in its preferences screen and you can also remove individual items from its index — click the "Remove Items" link at the top of each search screen.

Easing Metro Discomfort

YOUR "SINCE You Asked" feature in Monday's Express included a question from a reader about the possible removal of seating in Metrorail cars to create more standing room.

Express explained that Metro's thinking has been that riders travel long distances and prefer sitting to standing. Let's quit kidding the riders and public — riders spend a long time on Metro because Metro trains have been idling at stations rather than getting them where they need to go. With ride times on the various Metro lines — at least mine — continuing to increase, I have a better idea: We should have La-Z-Boy seating added to ease our discomfort. Maybe if delays weren't such a constant problem, riders wouldn't have such a need for seating.

Simpson Clan Blames Viox, Ralph Nader for 'SNL' Gaffe

After ASHLEE SIMPSON was busted for a "Saturday Night Live" lip-synch gone awry, her father said Monday she used the extra help because acid reflux disease had made her voice hoarse. "Just like any artist in America, she has a backing track that she pushes so you don't have to hear her croak through a song on national television," Joe Simpson told Ryan Seacrest on Los Angeles radio station KIIS-FM. He insisted it would be Ashlee's live voice alone during her appearance on NBC's "Radio Music Awards" Monday night. (AP)

'We Just Needed Someone Skanky, and There She Was'

CATHERINE ZETA-JONES should be flattered her image was used on the Web site of a Nevada topless club, a club spokesman said Monday. Jones is suing The Spice House for using her picture without her permission, according to a lawsuit filed last week. The designer found pictures of Jones on a German Web site that offered "royalty-free graphics," said the club's marketing director. "We had no idea it was Catherine Zeta-Jones; one wouldn't think [she] would appear in a free graphics Web site." (AP)

COMEBACKS

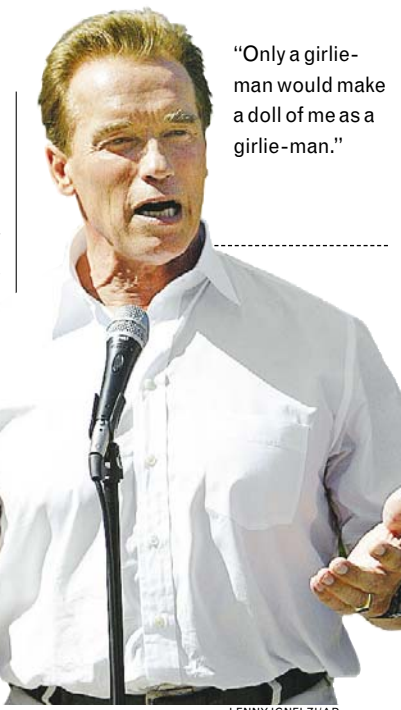

Love Is in the Air

COURTNEY LOVE made a triumphant return to the world of live, non-violent rock on Sunday in San Diego, reported New Musical Express. About 400 turned out to see Love perform songs from "America's Sweetheart." She smoked for the entire set and occasionally had to read lyrics off a music stand. She also pleaded for patrons to vote: "Are you going to fing vote?" she asked. "I need you to get me out of fing trouble. Please vote." (EXPRESS)

"The reward will go to 'the first Ohio voter who has their picture taken with the real-life Arnold Schwarzenegger — who presumably won't be wearing a pink dress — and the lifelike but plastic new 'Governor Girlie Man' bobblehead,'" said toymaker John Edgell. Don DeLillo's Papers Deemed 'Hot' by UT-Austin

The University of Texas, Austin, has acquired the archive of acclaimed American novelist DON DELILLO. The papers of DeLillo, author of 13 novels and three plays, includes some 120 boxes of notes, drafts and typescripts for his work, besides articles, correspondence and unpublished material dating from 1959 to 2003, said officials from the Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center last week. DeLillo's first novel, "Americana," was published in 1971. He also wrote the critically acclaimed "White Noise," "Libra" and "Underworld." His awards include a National Book Award and a PEN/Faulkner Award. (AP)

'THAT'S HOT'

The Longest Sentence Paris Can Remember, or Spell

Sin City regular PARIS HILTON has finally found a place she can call home in Las Vegas. Hilton is opening Club Paris and designing her own suite at the Aladdin hotel-casino on the Strip. The property was purchased by an investment group led by Robert Earl, Planet

Hollywood's founder. "Las Vegas is hot, Planet Hollywood is hot and I wanted to be part of the newest, hottest resort in Las Vegas," Hilton said. "I will see everyone back here on New Year's Eve when I officially open Club Paris in Las Vegas and Orlando on the same night! That's hot!" (AP)

A NEW MUSEUM SERIES
FOR 2004-2005

Leading physicians, scientists, bioethicists, and social commentators reflect on the Museum's latest exhibition, Deadly Medicine: Creating the Master Race, and its relevance to our time.

THE DEATH OF HIPPOCRATES: THE "LOGIC" OF NAZI MEDICINE

Sherwin B. Nuland, best-selling author of How We Die and Lost in America: A Journey with My Father and Clinical Professor of Surgery at Yale University, where he also teaches bioethics, discusses German contributions to medical science from the 1860s up to the Nazi era and how, even today, science intended for the public good can sometimes have disastrous consequences.

Hosted by Sara J. Bloomfield, Museum Director

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28 • 7 P.M.

FUTURE INSIGHTS PROGRAMS

January 13 • Ruth Faden, Director, Phoebe R. Berman Bioethics Institute, Johns Hopkins University

February 10 • Leon Wieseltier, Literary Editor, The New Republic

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Don't be too quick to judge someone who appears to fit a certain mold. Be specific and look at each case separately and objectively.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You needn't be so detached. Do your best to involve yourself in a direct, hands-on manner. Close friends will be proud.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your faith and trust will be put to the test, and you were best to leave certain painful episodes very much and move forward.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Your sense of history may not serve you as well as you expected, when a very real sense of the here-and-now is what is really required.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Even while hanging on to your own freedom and independence you can do a great deal to help someone else take a step in the same direction.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It is important that you get in touch with your roots — if only in a general way. Answers to questions are around the corner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone may be a little too demanding, and it will be up to you to draw the line as soon as you feel that he or she is going too far.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You can count on someone to be there when you ask — but you must be sure to make your demands simple and clear.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may be reckless and carefree throughout the day, deaf to the warnings friends and relatives have to offer. Fortunately, you are lucky.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) It may not be up to you to decide an issue that affects friends and family members. You can, however, influence that decision indirectly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can keep a special relationship from deteriorating simply by being a little more generous with your time and energy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may have a great deal of ground to cover in a remarkably short time. Concentrate on those things that can increase efficiency.
